Song Inspiration and story:

"You've Got That Zing Thing" is a song straight from my heart, written to celebrate 30 incredible years of togetherness with the love of my life. 35 years ago, I met a girl who knocked me off my feet. She had that something special that made my world feel different. And guess what? After three decades, she still does. That's what this song is all about—how love, when it's real, stays electric.

"You've Got That Zing Thing" is the soundtrack to our love story. It's about how love isn't just something you fall into—it's something you hold onto. It's about the late nights talking, the road trips with no destination, the quiet moments that mean everything. From stolen glances to late-night laughter and everyday moments, the "zing" is in the little things that make up a relationship

Musically, it's an old-school rock-and-blues feel, simple lyrics with a groove that reflects the excitement, warmth, and playfulness of a love that never gets old. The song makes you want to move, but underneath it all, it's a love letter—one that I hope reminds you of the people who make life worth singing about.

This song is my way of celebrating the woman who keeps me on my toes, who's been my road-trip partner, my best friend, and the reason I still get butterflies. If you've got someone who keeps your heart racing, crank this one up!
