Song Inspiration and story

“My Children Found My Gummies” began with a laugh and a spark of holiday mischief. When Ryan asked his co-writer, John W. Selleck, for an upbeat Christmas song, John’s imagination went straight to a familiar scene – creeping downstairs early on Christmas morning before the kids were awake, only to find Santa Claus fast asleep in the recliner, high as a kite and snoring away.

That funny mental image led to the question: how did Santa get that way? At first, John pictured the kids swapping out Santa’s milk for bourbon, but in true 2025 fashion, the story evolved – instead, the kids had accidentally left out Dad’s gummies. From there, the lyrics practically wrote themselves: light-hearted, cheeky, and full of Christmas charm. Ryan brought the story to life musically with a swing-jazz arrangement inspired by vintage classics like “Tequila” and Dinah Washington’s golden-era recordings. The track features acoustic bass, jazz guitar, strings, a full brass section, and a growl saxophone solo that ties the whole tune together.

It’s a playful modern Christmas tale told through the lens of retro jazz – full of warmth, humor, and a wink to holiday nostalgia. “My Children Found My Gummies” reminds us that even Santa can have an off night, and that sometimes, the best stories come from a little bit of unexpected chaos and a whole lot of swing.
